

Jack Swanson, Cowboy Artist

One of the West's best painters wants to help benefit the nonprofit Range Conservation Foundation, which is dedicated to intelligent use of natural resources.

Used to be that cowboy artists were just that: cowboys who drew and painted what they knew, firsthand.

In the tradition of Charlie Russell and Will James, Jack Swanson paints what he experienced during his cow punchin' days of decades ago. The accuracy and attention to detail in portrayal of ranching life is from memory and observation, not from photographs. But in case he needs a little brush-up on equine anatomy, he need only look out his window into the corral, or bring a horse into his studio.

Jack's work is in the permanent collections of many major galleries and museums and the Cowboy Artists of America Museum in Kerrville, Texas. One of his original oils hung in Ronald Reagan's White House.

Not just anyone can own a Jack Swanson work of art.

A limited number of Jack Swanson prints are now available through an exclusive arrangement with the Range Conservation Foundation.

The artist has selected some of his favorite images from his personal collection. They have never been offered as prints and are not available through galleries, publishers or any source other than the RCF.

As a constituent and supporter of RCF, you can have your choice of any of these collectible Jack Swanson prints for every $500 tax-deductible donation. Or you can just buy a print for $250 each.

No more than 125 of each image will be produced, personally signed and numbered by the artist. Actual image sizes will vary slightly to conform to the original and will be printed on 18"x24" archival paper. Each will include a Certificate of Authenticity signed by the artist and publisher. Satisfaction is guaranteed. All proceeds will benefit the foundation.

Choose from any of these images or collect all four. Allow four weeks for delivery.
